

THE PROBLEM STATEMENT

People often replace electronic devices while they are still usable. Without clear information about their condition, remaining life, or possible next use, many devices are left unused or eventually become waste. This pushes devices toward storage, premature replacement and e-waste instead of continued use.